

You May Lack Humility If...

1. You are frequently comparing yourself to others
2. You see yourself as deserving life, love, and respect; you lay claim to entitlements; you tenaciously hold on to rights
3. You have an inflated view of self; you often think of your importance, gifts, and abilities
4. You are consumed with what others think of you (appearance, intelligence, knowledge, abilities, achievements, worth, etc.)
5. You are a perfectionist (you place a higher value on what others think of you than you do of submission to God, obedience, and glorifying Him)
6. You are in constant need of approval
7. You talk more than you listen; you think you have something more important to say than others; your thoughts are valuable and others need to hear them
8. You voice your opinions, desires, preferences, aversions even when you are not asked
9. You talk more about yourself than seeking to learn about others
10. You are inconsiderate of the desires and feelings of others (loud, insensitive, impositional, lack social manners, invite yourself into situations, draw attention in group settings, etc.)
11. You seek to control others
12. You are insecure or frequently experience anxiety
13. You are performance oriented
14. You seek independence rather than community
15. You have a hard time submitting to other people, especially authority
16. You act or speak in disrespect
17. You complain
18. You are impatient
19. You are easily irritated
20. You get frustrated easily
21. You pout or throw tantrums when you do not get what you want or something you want is taken from you
22. You are jealous or envious
23. You criticize and judge others (making self look better by making others look worse)
24. You lack gratitude; you are discontent, never satisfied or satisfaction is shortly lived; you expect more
25. You focus on what you lack (gifts, abilities, possessions, health, appreciation, etc.)
26. You anger easily; are frequently angry, or burst out in anger
27. You withdraw from conflict rather than seek resolution
28. You are easily devastated by criticism
29. Acceptance by others is critical; you fear rejection
30. You are unteachable (think you already know all that is important to know in a given subject or situation)
31. You lack service or only serve when there is praise, recognition, reward, or gain
32. You lack compassion and care for others (more concerned about the hardships of self than others)
33. You find it hard to admit fault and take ownership of guilt
34. You find it hard to ask for forgiveness
35. You frequently justify or minimize your own sin and shortcomings
36. You frequently assume or maximize the sin and shortcomings of others
37. You do not pray as you ought to pray
38. You use, exploit, or take advantage of others
39. You deceive or lie to protect your reputation
40. You exaggerate
41. You draw attention to self through image, behavior, appearance, speech, association, etc.
42. You lack close relationships (the trouble outweighs the benefits; you are self-sufficient)
43. You frequently make excuses
44. You are highly competitive; you cannot stand losing; you must win
45. You secretly rejoice in the failure of others (competition is reduced, self shines brighter)
46. You boast (secretly or publicly)
47. You rarely or never compliment, praise (secretly or publicly), or express appreciation for others
48. You allow for double-standards in your treatment of people
49. You have a low view of God
50. You lack regular worship to God
51. You have a drive for self-esteem